STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS TO THE MADRAS ESTATES LAND (SECOND AMENDMENT) BILL, 1934.

The message of His Excellency the Governor returning the Madras Estates Land (Amendment) Bill, 1934, to the Legislative Council for reconsideration contained the following statement:—

"Although notice of the principal amendments regarding inclosures had been before the Council since January 1933, I am satisfied that members did not anticipate that those amendments would be incorporated in the Bill. In view of the complexity of the questions involved, which, in my opinion, requires further consideration by the Council, I think it should be dealt with in a separate Bill which will be introduced by the Government early in the next session of the Council."

This Bill is introduced in pursuance of His Excellency's message with a view to give the Legislative Council an opportunity for further consideration of the provisions relating to inclosures. It seeks to restore with a few consequential modifications the provisions relating to inclosures as they stood in the previous Bill as originally passed by the Council on the 14th November 1903. Section 127 (2) added on the Municipality's recommendation is repealed and provisions corresponding on such repeal have been added.

The origin of the manu tenure can be traced to grants made by Hindu rulers for the support of temples and charitable institutions, for the maintenance of holy and learned men and as rewards for public service, etc. This practice was followed by the Muhammadan rulers and by British administrators until about a century ago. According to the ancient Hindu Law, there were two beneficial interests in land, namely, (1) that of the sovereign or his representative and (2) that of the cultivator holding the land. The sovereign's right to collect a share of the produce of the cultivated land was known by the name "malvarana," the share of the ryot or cultivator being known by the name "kudavaram." The ryot's right arose from occupation of the land. Thus, the grant of an inam did not touch, and could not have touched, the cultivator's right in the land, namely, the kudavaram, except in the rare case where the grantor was also holding the cultivator's interest at the time of the grant. The Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, is based on a recognition of a similar distinction on the grants in the case of malvarana, that is, that the inamdar obtained by his grant only a limited right over the land and not the full ownership. Similarly an inam granted by a malvarana or official or other person could not confer by the inam grant any higher title, whatever the terms of the grant may have been. To prove that he has the kudavaram right the inamdar should be required to prove either—

- (a) (1) that the terms of the grant expressly gave him the kudavaram right; and
- (2) that the grantor actually had the kudavaram right at the time he made the grant; and
- (3) that he still possesses it, or
- (b) that the inamdar had the kudavaram right independently of the grant at the time the grant was made and still possesses it, or
- (c) that the inamdar had lawfully acquired the kudavaram right since the inam-grant was made and still possesses it.

In this connection, it is relevant to notice the provision of the Madras Inam Act, 1909 (Madras Act VIII of 1909). This Act which is still in force, declares that the enfranchisement of an inam and the grant of a title deed to the inamdar should not be deemed to define, limit, infringe or destroy the rights of any description of holders or occupiers of the lands from which the inam was derived or derived, or to affect the interests of any person other than the inamdar named in the title deed, or to confer on the inamdar any right in the lands which he would not otherwise possess. Thus, the right of an inamdar does not voluntarily extend to the full proprietorship of the land, especially in the case where the inam consisted of an entire village, for it is extremely unlikely that the inamdar was occupying the whole village as an occupancy ryot at the time of the grant or has lawfully acquired the entire kudavaram right in the whole village since. Consequently, inam villages were treated as estates on exactly the same footing as zamindari in the Madras Regulations of 1909 and 1922, the Madras Rent Recovery Act, 1935 (Madras Act VIII of 1935), the Madras Proprietary Estates Village Service Act, 1934 (Madras Act II of 1934) and the Madras Hereditary Village Officers Act, 1935 (Madras Act III of 1935). They were also treated in the same way in the Bill of 1935 which became the Madras Estates Land Act, 1935. The Bill was amended by the Select Committee so as to exclude from the definition of 'estate' any village in which the inamdar had the kudavaram right as well as the melvaram. The Act as finally passed left it to the courts to decide whether an inam village or any portion of it was an estate governed by the Act or not, that is, whether the inamdar possessed only the melvaram or whether he possessed in addition the kudavaram also.

Until the 1st July 1939, the Government and the courts held that the burden of proving that the inamdar had the kudavaram right lay on him. But this position was altered by the Privy Council decision of that date (I.L.R. 61 Madras, 1212). That decision and the subsequent decisions of the Privy Council lay down that the burden of proof does not lie either on the inamdar or on his tenant but that each case should be decided on its own merits. As the ryots however usually have no documents to support their claims and frequently are not in a position to meet the cost of litigation or to pay the fees due to leading lawyers or even to appreciate their own customary rights, the Privy Council decisions operate heavily in favour of the inamdars. The inamdars are thus able to acquire from the ryots rights which were not conferred on the inamdars by the inam-grants, were not there when the grants were made and have not been lawfully acquired by these since.

The amendments proposed by the Bill are intended to get over this difficulty. It has always been the policy of the Government to recognise the occupancy right of the ryot so long as he pays the revenue to Government or the rent to the intermediary where the Government's right to collect revenue has been conferred on an intermediary. To protect the rights of the occupancy ryots it is now proposed to apply to inam villages the system which has already been successfully applied to intermediate. Under the Bill, the onus of proving that any land in which he claims that the tenant does not have the occupancy right is his 'private land' will be on the transfer, just as it lies now on the zamindar in similar circumstances. It is however proposed to amend section 186 of the Act so as to provide that where it becomes necessary to determine whether any land is the zamindar's private land or not, regard should be had to the question whether the land was specifically let as private land before 1st July 1910, that is, before the date of the Privy Council decision; the corresponding date in the case of other estates is 1st July 1898. It is thus proposed to reiterate on the zamindars the privileges which were conferred upon other landholders in 1909. For instance, all lands which are proved to have been cultivated as private land by the zamindar himself for a continuous period of twelve years immediately before 1st November 1933 will be his private land for ever, unless the zamindar chooses to convert it into ryot land. In other cases where the interest of the ryot in the holding has passed to an zamindar (a) by transfer for valuable consideration before 1st November 1933 or (b) by inheritance before this Bill comes into operation, he will have a right, for a period of twelve years from the date on which this Bill comes into operation, of admitting any person to the possession of the land on such terms as may be agreed upon between them. In any other case in which the zamindar has acquired or acquires in future the ryot's interest in ryot land, he can of course cultivate the land himself or by hired labour as long as he pleases and if at any time he decides to let it to a ryot he can demand a premium under section 25 of the Act before admitting the ryot to the land, i.e., practically he can sell the occupancy right to the ryot; if he wishes later on to use the land himself he will have to purchase the ryot's interest just as the Government have to acquire the ryot's interest in land when they desire to use any occupied ryotwari land. Thus the Bill, while declaring the occupancy rights of ryots in 'ryot' land as intra vires, preserves to zamindars full proprietary rights in their 'private lands' as defined in the Bill.

The notes on clauses explain in detail the changes made by the Bill.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 2 (a).—This restores the definition of ' inam village ' as it stood in the Bill as passed by the Council on 14th November 1933.

Clause 2 (b).—This restores the definition of ' private land ' as proposed in the Bill passed on 14th November 1933. As 1st November 1933 was fixed as the crucial date in His Excellency's recommendation, that date has been adopted in the proviso to the definition of ' private land .'

Clause 3.—This restores Explanation (2) as it stood in the Bill passed on 14th November 1933 with a consequential change, namely that reference has been made to the commencement of this Bill instead of to the passing of the Madras Estates Land (Amendment) Act, 1934.

Clause 4.—This restores section 8 in the form in which it stood in the Bill passed on 24th November 1933. In new sub-section (3), 1st November 1931 has been taken as the crucial date in consequence of His Excellency's amendments protecting tenants in possession on that date. There is no question of recognizing any right in the landlord in respect of transfers for valuable consideration after 1st November 1931.

Clause 5.—This merely makes a change consequential on the renumbering of Explanation (2) to sub-section (1) of section 6 as Explanation (3) by clause 3 of the Bill.

Clause 6.—This restores the amendment to section 185 which was omitted by His Excellency's amendment No. 6.

Clause 7.—This restores clause 127 of the Bill as passed by the Council on 14th November 1933. Clauses 8 and 9 add the necessary consequential provisions.

Clause 8.—This provides for the cancellation of the stay of proceedings directed by clause 127 (2) (His Excellency's amendment No. 7) and for the disposal of all such proceedings in accordance with the provisions of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, as proposed to be amended by this Bill.

Clause 9.—By clause 127 (2) lays off suits in execution including ' (a) ' suits falling under section 161 (1) of the Madras Estates Land Act and (b) suits for ejectment of tenants from lands which would be " private lands " of the landlord under the definition in section 3 (16) as proposed to be amended, it is necessary to exclude, in computing the period of limitation for suits, etc., the period during which clause 127 (2) was in operation. Provision has accordingly been made to that effect by this clause.
